- SOUTH AFRICA -

Antelopes

April – October 2014

South Africa is, without any doubt, the perfect country for the antelope hunting considering a large variety of the species, 27 autochthonous and tens of species that come from Central Africa. The level of the hunt organization is very high. In a perfect style of the country's touristic tradition, this reserve has excellent capacities, thanks to their hunting lodges which can be compared with any 3 or 4 stars hotel and which can also provide a full comfort to the hunters who are coming with their families. The hunt begins at dawn with an all-road vehicle for searching game, which, once found, is to be approached on foot. The reserve is situated in Cape Province, which is at about one hour from Port Elisabeth. The guns we advise are small and medium caliber from 243 to 300 Weatherby (for Eland). Port Elisabeth is reachable with a local flight from Johannesburg (90 minutes).
